At the heart of Northwest.

Dual Impact...

Shelby Wetzel, Steve Rockhold, and Lisa Watson

Over the years, generous donors have provided scholarships to students, helped us construct buildings, installed educational technology in classrooms, and given faculty the resources to respond to timely programming opportunities.

Giving to the NWC Foundation in 2023 was no different, registering more than $1.2 million and allowing for enhancement to nearly every corner of campus.

One of NWC Foundation's recent focuses has been raising money for a new Student Center with a goal of creating a place where friendships can be formed, leadership developed, and out-of-classroom learning experienced. Turn the pages to read more about this exciting facility. We are extremely thankful to the many donors who invested in building a welcoming space on campus to help bind students together and capture the Trapper spirit!

Whether your gift was to the Student Center, scholarships, program support, or unrestricted, we extend our heartfelt appreciation on behalf of NWC's many grateful students.

{ Family MATTERS...

Steve and Megan Nickles' connection with Northwest College is interwoven with family involvement.

Their loyalty to the college and belief in the importance of education dates to Megan's parents. Bill Woods began teaching Biology and Life Sciences at NWC in 1961. Thirty years later, he had also served as Dean of Administrative Services, NWC's first Foundation Director and the college's Compliance Officer. Northwest was not just a place where he worked; it was a way of living for his family.

During the years he and Dolores were raising their four daughters, the college provided space and opportunities for personal and community growth. Each of the girls attended NWC; several worked on campus as part of summer or work-study crews. They enjoyed theatrical and musical performances. Dolores took Algebra I to polish her teaching skills and become a long-time substitute at Powell Middle School.

Bill and Dolores' youngest daughter, Megan, studied English at NWC, graduating in 1984. While enrolled she participated in theatre productions under the direction of Kermit Herd and was a member of the Northwest Singers led by Mike Masterson. She had the good fortune to tour with the musical group in China and the Philippines during her freshman year.

Steve and Megan Nickles

"I was well-educated at Northwest, and had fantastic experiences outside the classroom as well. Those two years were fun and worthwhile," noted Megan.

Megan transferred to the University of Wyoming and completed her bachelor's degree in English. While pursuing a master's degree in American Studies, she was working as a graduate teaching assistant when a young man in one of her English classes caught her eye. Eventually, she followed Steve Nickles back to his home state of Alaska where they married and started their family.

Steve worked in the oil industry, traveling to and from Prudhoe Bay on Alaska's north slope for two weeks at a time. He was part of a service company, Little Red Services, that focused on keeping the fluids flowing in wells.

In 1994, the Nickles moved their home base to Powell, so their children, Josey, 4, and Monte, 3, could grow up in a smaller community near extended family. Grant was born here in 1995, completing the family.

As residents, Megan and Steve followed in her parents' footsteps regarding involvement with Northwest. She volunteered time to support NWC, joining the Foundation Board of Directors. Their children participated in music camps and festivals and the family enjoyed the variety of activities Northwest College offered to area communities.

The Nickles' children would each go on to graduate from NWC: Josey in pre-professional studies; Monte with degrees in Music Technology and Multimedia; and Grant in Outdoor Education and Recreational Leadership. Reflective of the family's love, the common ground for all three was participation in various music ensembles.

When the NWC Foundation launched its Toward New Vistas endowment campaign in 2004, Megan was tapped to lead the alumni fundraising.

She and her sisters collaborated to grow the Bill and Dolores Woods Education Scholarship, and it's not surprising that Steve and Megan also created the Nickles Family Music Scholarship as their first major gift to NWC. The scholarship notes a preference for music technology students, representing son Monte who works as the audio and technology systems manager at Tippet Rise Art Center in Montana.

Megan's community service roles grew as the children aged. She studied and was ordained to the Episcopal priesthood, serving her local Powell church and assisting congregations around the Big Horn Basin. Recently, she's also taken on management work for the Episcopal Diocese of Wyoming.

Over the years, Steve assumed greater management duties for Little Red Services, climbing to the position of North Slope Field Manager, and leading over 200 employees on his Alaska shifts before taking early retirement in 2019 to stay closer to home. He now works as an Emergency Communications Technician for the Wyoming Department of Transportation.

During the early days of British Petroleum's exploration and pipeline construction in Alaska, Steve's mother, Rosemary Nickles, helped build a Boeing 727 shuttle service for workers to and from Prudhoe Bay. For 35 years, she worked alongside those she supervised to become the Director of Flight Services of what is now the Shared Services Aviation Department.

“Education is a way of life. And Northwest College has been part of that way of life for us for a long time.”

Rosemary passed away after battling pancreatic cancer in 2012. Steve and Megan funded their second endowment establishing the Rosemary Nickles Memorial Aviation Scholarship to educate future pilots through NWC's Aeronautics Program.

“My mother accomplished a lot with a high school education,” shared

Steve. “I know she would have been even more successful if she had access to the programs and quality education at NWC. She loved pilots and would have made a good one.”

When Northwest College secured support to add academic space for the Outdoor Education Leadership and Aerial Adventure program to the new Student Center, the Nickles rallied around another opportunity to financially support the college. Their gift will help fund the two-story climbing lab space and facilitate access to outdoor equipment for students through the outdoor recreation co-op.

Creatively named the ‘NIC NOC’, the Nickles Indoor Climbing and Nickles Outdoor Collective will honor son Grant's career pathway as an outdoor adventure therapy guide in Utah.

For Steve and Megan Nickles, giving to Northwest College Foundation has blossomed into a family affair. NWC is thankful for their generosity and pleased to help them honor loved ones by supporting students.

“Education is a way of life. And Northwest College has been part of that way of life for us for a long time. We are always glad to help others find their way, too.”

The Nickles family: Grant, Monte, Megan, Steve and Josey.

New Student Center set to open in November

Northwest College is putting the finishing touches on its new Student Center which will open in November.

Bridging the residential and academic sides of campus, the $24 million facility will house dining and food service operations in addition to a coffee bar, student lounge, student activities center, and state-of-the-art study and instructional spaces. Offices for resident life, campus security, and student success, plus an area for student clubs and a multi-purpose community meeting room are also included.

The new building will also be home to NWC's Outdoor Education Program with a new two-story academic lab and two classrooms. The Recreation Co-op will also move to the new facility, providing better access to outdoor gear for students and for the rental service Northwest College offers local community members.

As a special bonus, the overall project included construction of a temporary dining facility that is now being converted to a soccer facility and provide locker rooms, coaching and athletic training space, and concession for the NWC soccer teams, completing another NWC master plan project.

The Wyoming State Legislature provided $12 million to cover half of the project costs – only the second time in NWC's history that it has received general fund appropriations from the state for capital construction. The Northwest College Foundation completed a $3.5 million capital fundraising campaign to support the project and contributed an additional $1.35 million to assist with costs. The college has been saving for this project and used approximately $7 million from reserves for the remaining balance, meaning the Student Center will be opened debt-free.

"Nationwide, colleges and universities are recognizing the important role that student centers play in campus life. They serve as the heart, or the living room of a campus, and this new facility will help with both recruitment and retention, provide needed academic space and keep Northwest College on par with other institutions in Wyoming," remarked NWC President Lisa Watson.

An estimated 89 percent of the student center contract dollars stayed within the State of Wyoming, with 63 percent of the contract dollars remaining in the Big Horn Basin. A total of 24 companies in Wyoming were involved with the project, 12 of which are in the Big Horn Basin.

The Vredenburg Graham Legacy

By Laurel Vredenburg

Changing the world wasn't the goal for Amos Vredenburg (1923-2024) and Eva Lou Graham Vredenburg (1923-2004) when they retired and started building a scholarship fund through the Northwest College Foundation in 1987. They just wanted to help deserving Wyoming students complete their NWC educations. Scholarship awards focused on sophomores with financial need and strong grade point averages.

The Vredenburg/Graham Scholarship also honors the legacy of Eva Lou's father Herfie Stuart Graham (1886-1968) who moved to Wyoming from Albia, IA as a 22-year-old in 1908. He worked a couple of years as a courier on the Wiley Ditch project before homesteading outside Powell which was then a tent city. Herfie rolled up his sleeves and launched a lifetime of helping build a stable community with strong educational opportunities. He embodied the motto, "Service Above Self."

Herf focused on developing systems — irrigation, rural electrification, and public schools. He worked to consolidate several small districts into the Powell consolidated district. As chairman of the Powell School Board he was instrumental in hiring many teachers and administrators.

Eventually he and his wife Nellie retired from the farm and moved to town. But he wasn't done with schools. In 1939 he accepted employment as custodian of the newly built high school where he dispensed thoughtful advice to students, teachers, administrators, and board members.

Herf's youngest daughter Eva Lou graduated from high school in 1941 and enrolled in the Great Falls MT Business School. She went on to work for a construction company and then for the US Air Corp at an airfield in New Mexico. At war's end, she returned to Powell where she served as R.A. Nelson's secretary at First National Bank. Her life changed when she met Amos Vredenburg who was passing through town to visit his sister on his way from Missouri to Oregon. He never left. They married and raised 5 children.

After her death, Amos continued building the scholarship endowment in memory of Herfie and Eva Lou. The three of them believed a good education can enhance an individual's quality of life and the likelihood he or she will contribute to the greater good of humankind.

Income from these endowed funds continues to grow and is substantial. To date, 211 students have benefited. Do the math to imagine how many more will benefit in future years from this gift of love and belief in education.

It may be that one or more of these students will change the world.
