

Student Showcase Abstract
Grace Ones

During my time in Northwest's Education department I gained several invaluable skills like hands-on teaching, student engagement and instruction involved with agriculture education. A variety of interactive strategies were used to promote student learning, critical thinking, and interest in agriculture. This experience strengthened skills in communication, classroom management, and curriculum development while reinforcing the role of agricultural education in preparing students for future careers.