

As a portrait-photographer, I have worked with various subjects, such as animals, individuals, and families. In my business, M. Asay Photography, I demonstrate how my images portray emotions and represent the subject's story by romanticizing nostalgia, emphasizing unique characteristics, and celebrating authenticity in its most whimsical form. I create photographs that turn ordinary events, lifetime events, and many others into captivating images by drawing inspiration from fantasy and ethereal themes.

The way I stylize my images helps create life by using light, texture, and mood. This influences the viewers to see into another world. The ultimate goal of my photography is to produce pictures that showcase beauty and evoke an emotional response. Fusing staged scenes with genuine moments creates a stronger bond between me, the subject, and the viewer.

The classes that I have been taking at NWC have genuinely helped me as a photographer to become more business-savvy, creative, and knowledgeable. During my three years at Northwest College, I have learned how to properly prepare and edit my images to create work I'm proud to show.
